Snapshots: Sea and Sky and Sails

White sails, blue waters—always an ideal subject for the camera fan. A lasting memento of time and place is captured in the photo above which adds dramatic appeal to an always pleasant scene by framing against steel bridge. The waters above once echoed to the songs of the voyagers and the voices of missionary-explorers. Today, the Mackinac Bridge towers, a monument to the ingenuity and determination of modern man. And where the birch bark canoe once bobbed in the choppy waters of the Straits of Mackinac, pleasure craft ply the waves. The bridge stands 199 feet above the water and has been built to withstand the high winds which whistle through the straits and the powerful forces of winter-killed ice. Sail boating is popular in this Michigan wonderland.

Richard Nicholas, all of Birmingham. Recent weekend guests of the Bradys were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Klacking of Battle Creek.

An unidentified silver-colored object was noted in the skies over Grayling last Friday, which was probably a weather balloon, although some observers thought of it as an object carrying pontoons, because of its occasional double appearance. It was observed at the Avalanche at five minutes before noon, traveling in an easterly direction.

Mrs. Beulah Neafie left last week on Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Brown, to spend two weeks with them at Port Huron.

The WORLD OUTDOORS

When the fellows up and down my street put up their rods and reels and take to hunting, then I feel that it's time for me to start fishing in earnest. The season is just beginning.

This statement was made to the writer recently by one of the most successful and consistent fishermen you're likely to find anywhere—Frank Roshto Greenwood, Mississippi. Although he's not above a short fling with a cane pole and some worms, Roshto is a bass fisherman. This is natural enough, as he lives in "bass country."

Obviously, from the statement above, Roshto fishes all year round. He told me recently that he catches bass every month in the year. He has to vary his technique according to weather and water conditions. In many parts of the country, and perhaps particularly in the South, October is the time when sportsmen turn their attention away from rod and reel and to guns and dogs—except for a few diehards (year-round fishermen) like Frank Roshto.

Roshto catches his biggest fish during October and November. When the weather begins to get that first bite of winter, it seems that the big bass, no doubt tired of spending the summer in the depths where the water is cooler, rise to the top of the water and raid the shallows in search of food to feed a suddenly voracious appetite. This is the time of year when top water lures of the popping type are most deadly. Tossed along shorelines or beside stumps and old tree tops, and given a "pop" or two, they become irresistible to Mr. Bass. Maybe he strikes from hunger, perhaps just out of pure mischief—but strike he does, almost with a fury.

The Lucky Ford ladies held an outdoor barbecue at Bradford Lake Lodge, inviting their families and friends to start off the new season in September. The weather was ideal, nevertheless the fire was appreciated too.

The October meeting held at the home of Mrs. Frank Midkiff covered the subject of "Teenage Nutrition." Mrs. Worthing gave the lesson and Mrs. Wilson conducted the quiz which followed. After a delicious lunch members adjourned to meet on November 2nd at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Reed. Subject will be Convenient Kitchens and Kitchen Clinic.

Fight To Finish . . .

Many a moon has waxed and waned since there was a truly close Presidential election in this country. The last was that of 1916, when almost complete returns gave Charles Evans Hughes every reason to believe he had won. But the next day it was learned that Woodrow Wilson had carried California, an almost totally unexpected event, and that was enough to put him in the White House.

Subsequent elections have been won by wide and often overwhelming margins. But, many people think something like the 1916 pattern may appear in 1960. The standard polls, as of now, certainly indicate that. They have the two tickets running absolutely neck and neck with only a percentage point or two separating them. These polls also indicate that a comparatively small number of voters—five or six per cent or so—are undecided in their choice.

Yet, there are dissenters, who doubt the accuracy of polls this early in the game, and who also doubt if the undecided portion of the electorate is so small. For instance columnist Marquis Childs writes, "one of the most astute strategists in the Kennedy camp, scorning the current polls, estimated that as of today the strength of the two tickets is roughly Nixon 34 per cent, Kennedy 30 per cent, with a whopping 35 per cent undecided. That is a wholly subjective judgment, but it may come closer to the fact than the pollsters."

Mr. Childs also says, "With a total of 77 electoral votes, New York and California, the two giant states on opposite coasts, can mean the difference between defeat and victory." Both teams and their organizations are, therefore, putting out maximum effort in those states. Special emphasis is laid on the political grass-roots—that is, the precincts. Everything short of kidnapping has been done in some places to get people registered and to strengthen organization.

It's no secret that there is worry in the Kennedy-Johnson ranks. After the Senator's enormously successful experience in the primaries, many believed his campaign would go along on a jet-propelled basis. But it hasn't. The post-convention Congressional session was a bitter disappointment. Senator Johnson, for all his parliamentary skill and his position as majority leader, just couldn't wield the expected influence. The two measures which Senator Kennedy pushed most urgently—an expanded minimum wage bill, and a bill providing medical payments to elderly people through the Social Security system, both failed of enactment. Conservative Democratic leaders, such as Senator Byrd, have shown a definite lack of enthusiasm for the ticket, even though they haven't bolted.

In this area, Mr. Nixon has had better luck. His party, with few exceptions, is about as united as anyone could ask. The conservative wing, of which Senator Goldwater is now the leader, certainly doesn't follow Mr. Nixon all the way, but its members are working hard to elect the ticket. That is also true on the liberal side, where Governor Rockefeller is a prime force. The Nixon team has high hopes that the Governor, who is sparing no effort on the party's behalf, will prove a decisive influence in the all-important state of New York.

In any event, Mr. Nixon has said that this election may be the closest of the century. Mr. Kennedy is reported to hold a similar view. Both, it's safe to say, will continue to campaign on the principle that every last obtainable vote is vital.

SOBRESONS HOLD FIRST FAMILY REUNION
The first Sorenson family reunion was held Sunday, Oct. 2nd, at Danabod Hall. Several members of the family were in attendance at communion services at the Grayling Evangelical Lutheran church. A pot luck dinner was served at Danabod Hall at 1 p. m. with 100 members and guests. Mrs. George Sorenson (Annie) presided at the business meeting held after dinner. Officers were elected for the coming year: President, Edward Sorenson, Grayling; Vice Pres., Herman Sorenson, Detroit; Secretary, Eileen Sorenson Chapel, Harper Woods; Treasurer, Martha Sorenson Nuremberg, Port Sanilac; and Mrs. Earl Hodgins, Port Huron.
A letter of greeting from Rev. Alfred Sorenson, Des Moines, Iowa, told of the family history. "Old Sorenson and wife Leona came to the USA as a family with the exception of Olaf Sorenson, who came ahead of the others, to the area which is now Grayling. They were poor but sturdy, and later others established homes in Grayling. Most of the older ones came from an island in Denmark 'Falster'. All were talented in some field and did produce a livelihood but dwelled and with the others managed to concentrate on the south side near the area of the huge lumber yards. Fires scattered them like the 'Acadians' of Canada" which Longfellow writes of in "Evangeline."
The Sorensons were the mainstay of that colony on the south side. The Sorensons were the mainstays in the Lutheran church. They wanted a place where they could worship in the manner they worshipped in Denmark.
The next reunion will be the 2nd weekend after Labor Day, 1961, at Danabod Hall.
Those in attendance were from Detroit, Port Huron, Port Sanilac, Lansing and Houghton Lake. Guests were Rev. and Mrs. Harold Knudsen and Ruth Ann Kenosky.

Celebrates 80th Birthday
Mrs. Nettie Stephan Bowen, a life-long resident of Crawford County, was guest of honor at a party given for her by her daughters, Myrtle Vallad of Kalkaska, and Flora Skingley of Grayling. The occasion was her eightieth birthday.
The party was held at "Waverly" on the Ausable, the new home of the Skingleys, located about a half mile below the Stephan bridge where the Stephan brothers, John, George, Leon, Ben and Henry, a sister, Jeanne, who married Reuben Babbitt, and a sister Helen who married Martin Christenson, lived for many years. They were all engaged in resort business and all had large families. At one time there were 40 cousins in the settlement.
Mrs. Bowen's immediate family gathered at noon for a potluck lunch, followed later by an Open House for other relatives and friends.
Mrs. Vallad and Marian Rokos, daughter of Mrs. Skingley, presided at the birthday table, which was covered with a lace table cloth and adorned with silver candles in crystal holders and large birthday cake decorated with bouquets of red roses. It was made by the Grayling Bakery and was very much admired.
The table also held other cakes made by daughters-in-law, which were served with ice cream and coffee.
Later in the evening several of Mrs. Bowen's great granddaughters were in singing "Happy Birthday" to her while she cut the birthday cake. She was showered with many beautiful cards and gifts.
It was a beautiful day with a 75 degree temperature and Mrs. Bowen recalled that she was told that six inches of snow fell the day she was born 80 years ago. There were 87 relatives and friends in attendance, coming from Traverse City, Caro, Saginaw, Plymouth, Livonia, Lewiston, Roscommon, Kalkaska and Grayling.

Women's Nat'l. Bear Hunters Assn. Mrs. Mable Herman Kalkaska, Mich.
Dear Mrs. Dingman and members of the Nat'l. Bear Hunters Assn. I would like to thank all of you nice people about two weeks ago for the Remington 30-06 rifle with Weaver K 3 swivel scope that I won on your raffle. I do not know of anything else I could have asked any better as a moose-hunting trip is in the making. If I don't go, the gun will with one of my "buddies". The gun is truly a moose stopper. May you have a nice season and happy hunting.
Sincerely,
Hershel S. Campbell

A note from Mrs. David Smith gives us the following information: Mr. and Mrs. David B. Smith and sons John and David, Jr., of North Branch, were at their cottage from Friday through Monday. They added the white trim on the house at 316 Railroad Reserve St. What a difference a new paint job made to that place! Now it only Mr. Carlson and his crew keeps his promise to take down those rotten old trees. Laura Welch-Smith bought that house over 20 years ago. Laura came to Grayling as a small child before World War I. She remembers the rows of trees, the full length of R. R. Reserve St. They are all gone and forgotten except the ones in front of her place. The Smith's older sons are both in service yet. Letters To The Editor

To the students and other local citizens of Grayling, Michigan.
During a recent visit to Grayling, I was invited to attend a Junior Varsity football game between Gaylord and Grayling. Upon doing so I found that had I gone to a cemetery I would have witnessed more life and spirit than that of a poor loser, but a poor loser, be a good winner.

Why don't you get out there and back your team? Show your opponents that you do have a little fight after all. Don't be a poor loser, be a good winner.

P. S. I would like to give one suggestion for an effective cheering section. Know your cheers and when the cheerleaders begin to cheer try to drown them all out with your own voice.

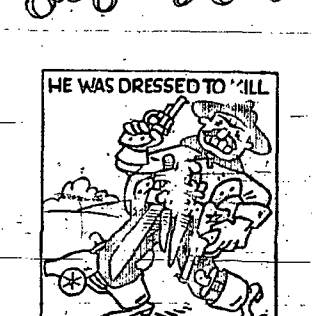

Where is Grayling's spirit? Don't you care whether or not you win a game? Why is this town lacking so much in spirit? Do you think of your J. V. games as unimportant? You had better think twice. These are the boys who will soon become your varsity team and what are you doing? You're putting them down without a fighting chance.

These boys need you to encourage them to go on when the going gets tough.

MEDICINAL: New discoveries in immunization are making protection against many diseases possible, especially against the viral illnesses. Children will appreciate this because most common childhood diseases are caused by viruses.

Of all of them, measles appears to produce the most discomfort and, in some cases, the most serious complications. This has prompted an intensive search for a measles vaccine. Current studies offer hope that one has been found.

At present, measles can be prevented or modified by gamma globulin (passive or temporary immunity). Size of dose determines whether complete prevention or modification will result. Complete prevention (large dose) is desired in exposures of children under 1, the chronically ill and those in a hospital or institution. This doesn't give the body a chance to build its own immunity, so the individual is susceptible to future attacks. The smaller, altering dose of gamma globulin permits the body to develop its own permanent immunity. Gamma globulin is useful only after a proven or suspected exposure has occurred. What we need is a vaccine which will actively produce immunity, like tetanus and polio vaccines, and protect the patient prior to exposure.

Experiments with a new vaccine promise permanent immunity against measles. Field trials have shown it to be safe and effective so far, but more experience and research needed before it can be accepted for general use.

"Thou Mayest Understand"

By Paul W. Johnson

Editor's Note—The following story was written by the son of Rev. and Mrs. Alvin Johnson of Grayling just prior to his departure for Hawaii and the Far East aboard the U. S. aircraft carrier, U.S.S. Hancock.

For us, the end of the line drew closer until there was no place left to go. As we, with gear, piled out of the nearly ancient bus it turned around and continued on its way, the bus driver satisfied he had performed his job quite expertly even though the stripping of gear, some immediately dropped their belongings on the pier and sat down. Some milled around talking in little groups about today's game between the Giants and Dodgers, while some of the more sentimental sat and thought. Thought about loved ones in the far distant, and of leaves in the too far distant. All at some time or another, viewed the pier, and that pier at the end of the inevitable which comes into the life of every able bodied and physically qualified young man. Mine started the day I said, "I do." But this was not the day I was to be married. I was to be a sailor. I was to be a man in uniform. The uniform of a commissioned officer in the United States Navy, and more specifically, that of L.C. Van Goch, stationed in the Hancock, at the Naval Reserve Training Center.

July 1st, 1960, was warm and humid as twenty new Seaman Apprentices sat or stood in their dress blues on the seeming endless pier, and that pier at the Naval Air Station in Alameda, one can glimpse the many wonders of a beautiful and equally intriguing shoreline. As I was looking past the Bay Bridge which connects Oakland and San Francisco, into the ever-present fog, my heart skipped a beat when I could barely trace the outline of a large ship emerging from the gray fog into the brilliant light of the sun. As it slowly came nearer I could tell it was an aircraft carrier, and knew my home for the next 18 months, the U.S.S. Hancock, although two hours away, was coming home.

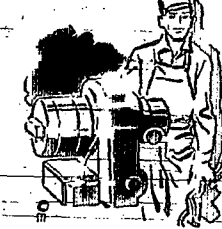

The Hancock, which displaces 44,000 tons and is almost 900 feet in length, was to be in port for two weeks taking on supplies, having minor repairs, and performing to her steam-catalysts within her tight deck. As for myself, these two weeks in port were spent getting used to the living conditions, office in which I was finding my way around the "innards" of this huge ship, and writing over 20 letters, some of which were long overdue. I didn't go ashore after the first few days, but my last weekend before we were to "set sail" for Hawaii, the weekend of July 18th, where we would be for four weeks.

Those two weeks seemed to fly fairly fast as I was constantly busy either performing tasks I knew were left in my care or else getting my nose into trouble. I should say looking for trouble, because the only trouble I really found was the encountered in the performance of my duties. The weekend we were to sail came around like its source of motivation was equal to the burst of a Cape Canaveral special. The day we were to leave I went into Oakland at 9:30 a. m. and made my first business call to Pop's Locker Club where I gathered all my civilian clothes together and later smuggled them not so cleverly on board ship. From there I paid another business call, this time to Pop's rival, Gus's Locker Club. There I bought three air-dungans pants as the three pair issued me in the reserves-measured 38" around my waist. If you know anything about the Armed Forces, you can guess that my dainty waist is only 38". (That's not bad seeing as I'm a 19-year old, 5'-10", 185 pounds of Sweed from Michigan supporting an in-the-process-of-growing-out-flat-top. During the morning of going out one stove through another to get to my next place of business and window shopping, I took time out, more than once, to call my folks in Grayling, Michigan. I being quite gray from the smoke and heat, I had the operator try my home phone in Michigan every 5 minutes for 20 minutes, while I waited, and waited and waited. The line was still busy. I bought a record by Tedd Smith, a religious recording artist for RCA Victor, and played for the Billy Graham Crusades, and mailed it to myself as I didn't know for sure whether or not I'd be allowed to take it aboard ship with me. (It should be waiting for me when I get to Hawaii, July the 22nd.) At 11:45 I placed the call again and got quite perturbed at the women on our party line. I could just imagine them gassing each other with juicy tidbits of lowdown, this time the operator couldn't get through on a main trunk line to Grayling as they were all in use. At 12 noon, I ordered a hamburger and french fries at the fountain in the only Kress department store in town and went upstairs to once again try to call home. Twelve-thirty came and went and still I hadn't contacted my family. I had to be back aboard ship by one, the expiration of all liberty, so I hailed a taxi with five other Hancock sailors and went back to the base. The way to feeling alone without a friend in this world, and quite dejected, I crammed myself into a phone booth. Hearing that the line was busy again or still, I once more asked the operator to try every five minutes and call me to let me know whether or not she made it through. When she promised this I hung up, thinking how much I wanted to talk to Mom and Dad, and also trying to think of the person from our line who was making this impossible. At 12:52, the operator still hadn't called me, and I was beginning to get the feeling that I was being put off. Being quite put out at her and the rest of the world in general, and not being in a friendly mood.

"I'm sorry sir, I forgot about it. One moment, please." The way to kill "Roscommon" Grayling 5178... yes, 9." "Operator! Cancel that call please!" "Cancel it sir?" "Yes ma'am, cancel it." Bang! I still had two minutes and 150 yards to go before I was aboard ship.

I got on board carrying my civies in my AWOL (canvas) bag. I went to the office and changed out of my dress blues to my uniform.

form of undress blues. When I came on board there were many sailors with their girls, wives and families, standing around talking about various subjects, but on the mind of each was implanted the fact that before the day was over their sailor would be leaving them for six months. This fact stood out in my mind also. Not for that reason however as my family was in Michigan, and that special girl was sitting at her desk in Radio Station KGMN - KCFM in Seattle. No, it really was impressed in my mind as I was thankful that my loved ones weren't there to see me off. I don't know how I would have stood it. Just being around these other couples and families did something to me. It brought to mind that fact that my loved ones were so far away, and the fact that I couldn't hug and kiss them, as the others were doing. No, I wasn't jealous... instead, I really felt sorry for them, for I knew they would have a hard time saying goodbye, and a hard time leaving this country bound for Japan, more so than I. I was so thankful I didn't have anyone here to say goodbye to, I was as miserable as they were who did.

I decided to walk around the ship, be a sneak, and watch some of the couples say goodbye. In one corner I happened to see four girls who just said goodbye to their sailor when... "All visitors and unauthorized personnel will leave the ship at this time," the loud speaker rang out. As I went back to watching the four girls, they had begun to dampen our newly swabbed decks. I don't think there's anything that has the effect on a male, than that of seeing a girl cry.

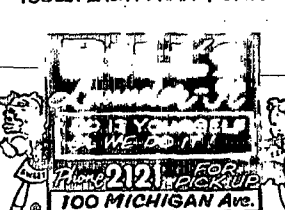

Outside, the first of three gangways was being made ready for the removal by a large crane. On the other were over two hundred girls and many families. On the decks most everyone was cramming out as far as they could so they wouldn't miss a single word their one and only was saying, "I was there also, just looking at all the broken hearted people, still feeling low. As the second gangway was being fitted into place for removal, I looked into the peaceful water between the ship and the pier, floating over so lazily with nothing to disturb it.
